Save the Date for the 2018 California Summer Vegetable Trials

Jennifer Zurko

What's now a yearly tradition, vegetable breeding companies dealing in the fresh market and home garden segments are hosting the Summer Vegetable Trials via Open Houses and Field Days. This event is hosted by six participating breeders in eight locations from August 13-17, 2018. Those breeders are listed below and on the Veggie Trials website at <https://vegetabletrials.co>.

Modeled after the long-standing California Spring Trials that are held annually during the month of April, attendees will have the opportunity to visit breeder company trial sites throughout the state in the middle of August.

Customers, growers, seed companies and the media should contact each company below to arrange their visit. Please note that not all stops are open all days. Visits will focus on observing new varieties in a field or garden setting and learning about new breeding and marketing opportunities from respective hosts.

National Garden Bureau, the non-profit organization promoting gardening on behalf of the horticulture industry, is pleased to organize and publicize this event on behalf of its members. As a bonus, many locations are also host to the All-America Selections Edible trials.

Individual companies hosting a Field Day or Open House during August are:
