McHutchison & Beekenkamp Announce Distribution Partnership

Jennifer Zurko

McHutchison has created a distribution partnership with Beekenkamp that started on January 1, 2026. McHutchison will now be accepting orders for the distribution of Beekenkamp products to growers throughout the U.S.

This announcement marks a significant milestone for both companies. Growers will gain access to Beekenkamp's extensive portfolio of genetics and high-quality young plants, while being supported by McHutchison's trusted sales network and customer service. The collaboration further strengthens McHutchison's mission to deliver exceptional products and innovative solutions that help growers succeed in an evolving marketplace.

"We are very excited to announce this new arrangement with an industry leader like Beekenkamp," said Ken Turrentine, President of McHutchison. "They are known worldwide for outstanding genetics, innovation and quality, so adding their products to our portfolio is a tremendous benefit for our growers."

This new relationship with McHutchison allows Beekenkamp to expand its reach into America, while offering growers reliable access to its world-class products.

"We are really pleased to partner with a great organization like McHutchison to strengthen our presence in the U.S. market," said Jeroen Steenbergen, Commercial Manager with Beekenkamp North America. "Their longstanding grower relationships and proven distribution experience make them an ideal partner because together we will provide growers with greater access to our genetics and the support which they need to thrive."

Growers interested in Beekenkamp's offerings through McHutchison are encouraged to connect with their sales representatives. GT
