

GROWERTALKS

GT in Brief

7/31/2026

For Stats From the World of Hort, Get Your AIPH Yearbook

Chris Beytes

If your job has you needing a grasp of the size and scope of the global horticulture industry (or if you're just curious), there's a publication for you: Volume 73 of the International Statistics Flowers and Plants 2025 Yearbook (the most recent currently available).

Produced by the International Association of Horticultural Producers (AIPH), in collaboration with Union Fleurs—International Flower Trade Association, this unique and authoritative annual publication provides the latest complete global dataset for the 2024 calendar year, delivering unrivaled insight into ornamentals production, trade and market development across more than 40 countries. Its 238 pages have:

- Updated trade and market-flow statistics
- Industry indicators
- Consumption data
- Price trends

All this on every important horticulture production country and every important crop category.

AIPH members get free access to this important volume. For everyone else, it's 195 euros.

To purchase a copy, go to aiph.org/giic/international-statistical-yearbook. GT